

Puerto Rican judge gets key to Vineland

FROM STAFF REPORTS • MAY 9, 2009

VINELAND -- Puerto Rican Court of Appeals Judge Abelardo Bermúdez Torres received a key to the city from Mayor Robert Romano on Friday.

Though many of his brothers were born in Vineland, Bermúdez Torres, 40, grew up in Puerto Rico and often comes back to the city to see all his family that resides here.

"I love this city just like my own. This is like a second home. Every time I vacation, I come here," he said.

Romano met with him Friday morning to present him with the key to the city and read a proclamation in honor of Bermúdez Torres' recent promotion. He also accompanied the mayor on his other appointments.

Source: The Daily Journal

